

You Said...

- There's not enough consistency in terms of awarding reward points and with the use of standard cards.
- Communication is one way, and it is difficult to know who to contact.
- Changes to the mobile phone policy would be welcomed as levels of distractions are too high for students.
- Details of the reason for detentions should be shared with parents.

We Do...

- Students receive weekly automatic reward points for attendance (double points for Friday) and for no consequences, to help with consistency.
- Staff are asked to award 3 rewards points and 1 best in class per lesson.
- Tutors are asked to check student standards and record on cards every morning. Staff are asked to actively search for positive behaviours.
- Session 1 of Staff training on logging detentions and reasons for has already taken place this half-term.

We Will...

- Directors of learning will send information home regarding communication channels and procedures. So, parents know whom to contact.
- Inform and involve parents/students on the implementation phase of the new mobile phone policy.
 - Issue more staff training before new informative detention systems/communications are rolled out.
- Create a new parental engagement section on the academy website.
